

Dear Sirs,

My name is Boris Karanović and I'm an allergy and clinical immunology specialist working in the University Hospital Center Zagreb, Zagreb, Croatia.

I have been a member of ESID during several years and attended ESID Biennial meetings, as well as other international immunodeficiency meetings and ESID Schools.

During my residency I have spent 6 months at Gregorio Marañón hospital in Madrid, Spain, expanding my knowledge in the field of PID which became the national reference center for primary immunodeficiencies.

I have been working in the field of immunodeficiencies in my hospital for several years and coming from a country that still doesn't have a reference center for PID I am very motivated to raise awareness about these diseases, improve diagnosis and treatment of these diseases in my hospital and in the country, as well as collaborate with other centers in Europe and the rest of the world.

I have already started to spread the knowledge about PID in various other medical fields, such as pulmonology and gastroenterology, through lectures and seminars.

With my colleagues, I am currently organizing the 1st ESID PID Care in development School which will take place in Zagreb, Croatia in September.

With all this in mind, I think I will be a good candidate for the position at the PID Care in development working party, and if elected, it would be my honour and pleasure working at that position.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely yours,

Boris Karanović
