Dear ESID board,

I am writing to express my strong interest in the ESID Junior Country Representative role for Ireland. As a dedicated clinician and researcher in the field of Immunology, I am eager to help foster a network of young professionals who are committed to improving patient care and advancing research in immunodeficiencies.

Currently, I am currently a Clinical Immunology trainee practising in St. James's Hospital in Dublin, Ireland. My current work involves the clinical management of patients with immunodeficiency, allergy and autoimmunity in addition to carrying through laboratory work and research in the area of immunodeficiency. In addition to my professional experience, I am currently actively involved collaborating with the ESID Clinical Working Party in to prioritise areas for guideline development in managing inborn errors of immunity (IEI). This role has allowed me to gain an understanding of the challenges and opportunities in this field, as well as to help develop my collaborative and organisational skills. On a local level, I been involved in initiatives to raise awareness for patients with IEI. For example, in 2021 I organised the World Primary Immunodeficiency Week in St. James's Hospital in Dublin.

As an ESID Junior Country Representative, I will work to promote the society's objectives, engage with fellow professionals, and support initiatives that enhance awareness and research in immunodeficiencies. I am particularly interested in facilitating communication between young professionals and established experts in the field, fostering a collaborative environment that encourages knowledge sharing.

Thank you for considering my application.

Yours sincerely,

Dr. Cliodhna Murray
